WATERVALE INN SINCE 1917

The Leo Hale Lumber Company built the town of Watervale in 1892, and operated it for two short years before it went bankrupt, and then the town was abandoned. Fourteen buildings stood in a row on Lower Herring Lake with a railway that went from Upper Herring Lake to Lake Michigan running in front of those buildings. The town included a boarding house, post office, school master's house, grocery store and company offices. Today ten of those original buildings still stand and have become the Inn at Watervale and cottages.

Dr Oscar Kraft purchased the town of Watervale in 1917 and Watervale has remained in the Kraft family ever since. The Kraft/Noble family is committed to preserving the past and protecting the future. Watervale is listed on the National Historic Register and has placed more than a mile of Lake Michigan shoreline in a Conservation Easement with the Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy. For more than one-hundred years, Watervale has provided families with a gathering spot like no other.

We look forward to your family experiencing the traditions of Watervale.
